

To improve the enforcement of judgments in Europe

The EJE (European Judicial Enforcement) project has two fundamental objectives:

- To provide European citizens with the information needed to enforce court judgments in the territories of other Member States, thereby improving access to justice.
- To give European judicial officers the tools needed to bolster mutual trust so as to encourage better cooperation in their work as enforcement officers.

In order to achieve these objectives, the EJE project has one essential tool:

The EJE web site is available in English, Dutch, French, German, Hungarian, Italian and Polish.

Its aim is to provide the information needed to enforce a court judgment throughout the European Union. To begin with, information will be provided by the project partners (Belgium, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Poland and Scotland) relating to Member States.

■ The EJE Information Sheets

The EJE information sheets provide individuals, businesses and legal professionals with information on the legal tools available and the applicable procedures for enforcing a court judgment in another Member State.

These information sheets provide answers to questions that could arise in this situation, e.g. what are the preconditions for enforcing a judgment? Which is the competent authority? What procedure should be followed? What options are available? What are the effects of an order to seize real/personal property? How can an enforcement order be challenged?

■ The Directory

The EJE web site provides European litigants and legal professionals with an e-directory of Judicial Officers in Europe.

This directory lists the contact details of judicial officers who are qualified to operate in the jurisdiction where the order is to be enforced.

It also gives details of the languages spoken by each office of judicial officers.

■ Project News

The EJE web site provides information on project developments, European legislation and case law from the Court of Justice of the European Union, as well as national legislation and case law relating to the enforcement of court judgments that could be of interest to judicial officers.

A quarterly newsletter on legal matters – available in English and French – reproduces the main points from this information. The newsletter can be accessed on the web site, and it is also possible to take out a subscription.

■ Documentation

The EJE web site provides a range of documentation on topics specifically related to the enforcement of judgments in Europe. This documentation is directed at all legal professionals throughout Europe.
